"Kalliston" Seamless WOOL RUGS

Offer Exceptional Value At Moderate Prices

The surface of the "Kalliston" is a closely woven wool fabric, which provides great durability and possesses sufficient weight to cause the Rugs to lie flat, the edges being devoid of any tendency to curl.

These desirable features are supplemented by unusually attractive decorative qualities, the "Kalliston" being made in 15 different colors, as well as in 11 exquisite pastel shades. The designs consist mostly of rich, solid-color centers with two-tone borders—an effect which is in pleasing harmony with figured draperies, wall and furniture coverings.

"Kalliston" Rugs are obtainable in six different sizes, ranging from 26 in.x54 in. at $5.05, to 9 ft.x12 ft. at $55.00. Special sizes, any length and in any loom width up to 12 feet, made to order at reasonable prices.

Republican National Committee Makes Claims Based on Party Enrollment.

NEW YORK AND INDIANA

New Jersey Vote Indicates Falling Off in Democratic Ascendency. Situation in New England.

With the results of political primaries matter of record, it is possible to throw some light on the probable outcome of the voting which is to take place November 7, it was claimed today at the offices of the republican national

While the primaries for the selection of democratic and republican candidates for senators, representatives and governors of states are not calculated to bring out the full voting strength of any of the parties, still, it is argued, it is reasonable to suppose that the ratio for the primaries will be approximately Showing Made for Republicans.

The republican state chairmen have filed with the national committee here, in a number of instances, the results of the primaries or of the enrollment of the primaries or of the enrollment of voters in their states.

From the chairman of the republican state committee of New York, Frederick C. Tanner, has come the information that the republican enrollment is 738,631, democratic, 651,873, and progressive, 46,206. The official vote of the recent New York primaries, at which the nominees for governor, senator and representatives were selected, has not yet been announced.

This enrollment in New York, however, is very encouraging to the re-ever, is very encouraging to the re-publicans. They figure that even should the entire progressive vote enrolled be cast for the democratic nominees for President and Vice President the republi-cans would still have a wide margin over the democrats.

cans would still have a wide margin over the democrats.

The New York primaries, however, indicate conclusively, in the view of republican committeemen, that the progressive vote is not only not going in its entirety to the democrats, but that a large majority of the progressives will side with the republicans when it comes to a showdown. Gov. Whitman, choice of the republicans for governor, made the race on the progressive ticket as well. He polled a much larger progressive vote than did Samuel Seabury, the democratic candidate for governor, who also sought the progressive nomination.

Conditions in Indiana.

From the Indiana republican state ommittee has come the information that registration in that state will not take place, until October 9. The primaries, however, were held March 7 last. In those primary elections, it is shown, the combined vote for the democratic candidates for governor was 159,737, while the combined vote for the republican candidates for the same office was 209,043. The vote cast for the single democratic candidate for senator was 151,931, while the combined vote for republican candidates for that office was 219,800. The vote for that office was 219,800. The vote for the democratic candidate for President was 166,423, and for the republican embidate for President was 176,073.

Of course, the vote on November 7 is expected to exceed these figures by a great many thousands. But the republican leaders contend that the relative standing of the two parties will be the same when the final count is taken, except that the republicans will have an even greater lead over the democrats, owing to the fact that many progressives in Indiana in recent months have returned to the fold. Indiana is one of the states which the democrats are claiming for their own.

Striking Results in New Jersey. that registration in that state will not Striking Results in New Jersey. Perhaps the most striking results so far btained, however, were those of the primaries in New Jersey Tuesday. The final official figures are not available, but the size of the republican vote as compared to that cast by the democrats bodes ill for the administration, it is said by republican observer.

the administration, it is said by republican observers.

President Wilson in 1912 polled 178,289 in New Jersey, his own state. The vote cast for republican candidates for the nominations for governor and senator Tuesday exceeded this figure, while those for similar democratic candidates fell far below, and this notwithstanding that there was a bitter fight on between Senator Martine and the choice of the administration for the senatorial nomination. Attorney General Wescott of the state. Martine decisively defeated Wescott, which has not tended to relieve the felings of the Wilson supporters.

The republican leaders are claiming New Jersey, as well as New York, by a large majority. The records to date seem to favor this claim. The combined republican and progressive vote in 1912 was 234,245. Indications are today that the progressives are now back in line with the republican party.

Vermont and Connecticut.

Vermont is not now regarded by the republican leaders as one of the doubtful states. The statement received from the states. The statement received from the republican state committee chairman. Stanley C. Wilson, shows just how likely that state is to go republican. The primaries were held there September 12. The highest vote cast for any republican candidate at the primaries was for governor. He received 34.244 votes. The highest vote cast for any democratic candidate was also for governor, and he received only 6.562.

Another New England state, Connecticut, which is surely counted in the republican column by the leaders of that party, in its report to the national committee, states that, as there is no system of primaries in the state, there never has been collected any data covering registration. The chairman of the state committee, however, gives the figures of the election in 1914 to justify his claim that his state is safely republican.

In 1914 Senator Brandegee, republican, received 35,983 votes; Baldwin, the democratic nominee for senator, received 76,081, while the progressive candidate polled 6,853. In the same year the republican candidate for governor polled 91,263 votes, the democratic candidate, 73,888, and the progressive candidate, 73,888, and the progressive candidate, 73,888, and the progressive candidate, 8,030. The progressives have returned to their affiliation with the republican party to a great extent since that election, it is said.

Nebraska Claims Disputed.

Nebraska Claims Disputed.

Democratic claims are being adranced in connection with Nebraska. Official reports of the primaries held in hat state from the republican state chairman do not give promise of a lemocratic victory.

The total cast at the presidential primary in Nebraska April 18 was 102,-755 republican, 86,889 democratic, 432 progressive. The primaries in 1914, August 18, gave the republicans a total of 74,493, the democrats 67,299 and the progressives 2,354.

Miss Colby's reason for shooting, she told the sheriff after herarrest, was that Thomas had insulted her. The wounded man's condition is said to be extremely critical.

> Convention Plans Left Out. An eleventh-hour change in the plans of the leaders, induced by the argu-

of the national republican committee and Senator James W. Wadsworth, eliminated from the platform, as adopted, the tentative plank intended to place the party on record as favoring a return to the system of nominating state officers by conventions. Although the general sentiment was overwhelmingly in favor of the convention system, the belief finally prevailed that it was inadvisable to recommend the change at this time.

Prior to the final business session of the conference, the state committee selected presidential electors. Contrary to expectations, no progressives were named. Vacancies were left in six congressional districts, however, and members of that party may be selected to fill these.

Platform Declaration.

Besides praising the presidential and gubernatorial candidates of the party, the platform declared for a resubmission of the woman suffrage amendment in 1917, condemned the national de-fense act, criticised the recent mobili-wide inequalities in interest rates disfense act, criticised the recent mobili-zation on the Mexican frontier as an example of the "viciousness" of the ad-ministration's preparedness policy, de-nounced the Underwood tariff bill, con-demned the Adamson eight-hour law and took a firm stand for the principle of arbitrating industrial disputes. The electors at large chosen were George Eastman of Rochester and Thomas R. Proctor of Utra.
